

Perplexed and maddened by his younger brother's disturbing disappearances and even more troublesome returns, Steven McGuire loses his bearings during his 1968 search-and-rescue mission to retrieve Paul from Berber country in the foothills of Morocco's High Atlas Mountains. Ten years later, Paul's hide-and-seek antics in Oregon's High Desert echo the two Westerners' previous misadventures in North Africa. The vivid surface textures of travelogue and taut, lyrical observations of the natural world bring these parallel tales to life as we witness Steven's evolving response to the moral dilemma repeatedly forced upon him—Will he forever be his brother's keeper?

Peter Boffey's poetry, book reviews, and translations of French poetry and essays have appeared in little magazines; TWO HALF BROTHERS, OR SEPARATING OUT is his first novel.
